

Not allowing number portability between wireless carriers goes against the grain of deregulation. Consumers should not be held hostage by carriers and allowed to switch without losing their number. This would also reduce the proliferation of area codes in densely populated areas.